2013 SUMMER NATIONAL CONFERENCE

The Habitat X Conferences blend a potent mix of industry visioning, technical training, and skill refinement. With a cap of 60 participants, every single person can choose to meet and learn about anyone else. And everyone gets to participate in fine-tuning the agenda. This creates powerful collaboration among attendees that is hard to duplicate at either traditional conferences or at standard technical training sessions.

The site of the Habitat X Conference is Helena, Montana, on the campus of Carroll College and within walking distance from downtown hotels, restaurants, and night spots. It's a comfortable and relaxing place for a learning event like this.

Stay a few extra days and take in some of the nearby recreational opportunities such as blue-ribbon fly fishing, visiting Lewis and Clark sites, and outdoor live music.

CONFERENCE FACULTY

CHRIS DORSI is the founder of Habitat X, and a widely respected trainer, facilitator, and author. He's the coauthor of "Residential Energy" and other respected titles on sustainable housing. His upcoming book, "Human Habitat", is due on the shelves in 2014.

ANN EDMINSTER will join Habitat X Summer National Conference this year as a facilitator. She was recently nominated as the ACI Woman of the Year, an acknowledgement of her diligent efforts to envision and design the next generation of sustainable housing. Ann is the author of "Energy Free: Homes for a Small Planet".

BEN CICHOWSKI will again join Summer National to lead tracks on photography, video production, and field training methods.

J WEST will return to lead tracks on communication, educational technology, and instructional design.
